2018 ANNUAL REPORT

Community happens here

Across New Hampshire, people are building and strengthening the bonds of community: By mentoring kids, reaching out to seniors, supporting people in recovery, protecting natural resources, strengthening families, welcoming our newest neighbors. By giving, by volunteering, by speaking up.

Community ties make us healthier, and happier, and they make our democracy stronger.

The work of community building takes courage — and its twin, vulnerability. It takes grit, and it takes compassion, and it takes love. When times are fractious, this important work becomes more important still.

Generous contributions from New Hampshire residents and businesses made it possible for the New Hampshire Charitable Foundation to make grants to more than 1,800 nonprofit organizations doing critical community-building work in 2018, including those featured in this report.

We are proud to support and work alongside the people who are strengthening community in New Hampshire every day, for everyone who calls New Hampshire home.

HARRIS CENTER FOR CONSERVATION EDUCATION

Community happens when the frogs come out

On early spring nights in Keene, when it is raining and temperatures hover around 45 degrees, a curious thing happens:

People come outside.

They come in rain gear and reflective vests, armed with flashlights. They walk slowly along roadsides, playing beams of light over slick pavement. They are searching for lovestruck amphibians on the move.

Every spring, hundreds of thousands of amphibians cross busy roadways from wooded areas to wetland breeding grounds and back — often with fatal results.

The Harris Center for Conservation Education organizes brigades of “citizen scientists” who help them survive the journey. Amphibians — like spring peepers and wood frogs and American toads and spotted salamanders — play a vital role in forest ecosystems and are threatened worldwide. In this corner of the world, they get a little help.

Entire families come out, and retirees, and business people and college kids. In one place, the city even closes the road on “big nights” for amphibian migration.

The whole thing takes on an air of festivity — a cross between trick-or-treating and an Easter egg hunt.

When Isis and Jason Latham moved to Keene, near one of the crossing sites, “salamander night” was how their kids met neighborhood friends. This year, the Lathams offered their home as a warming station during migration nights, inviting fellow citizen scientists in for hot chocolate.

This might be the definition of symbiosis: The human community helps the amphibians survive, while the amphibians give people a chance to strengthen community.

NEW HAMPSHIRE THEATRE PROJECT

Community happens when it's safe to talk about the hard things

Low-hanging clouds are lifting from the Mount Washington Valley as the stage lights come up in Gorham's Medallion Opera House.

Eight actors from the New Hampshire Theatre Project take the stage. They are portraying a family dealing with the ravages of the opioid crisis. The script is raw, visceral, provocative — as the fictional family navigates the grief, rage, shame, guilt, confusion and love that so many real New Hampshire families grapple with in isolation. For many in the audience, the details hit very close to home.

The "Elephant in the Room" series uses theatre to bring people together to talk about immensely difficult things — suicide, eating disorders, substance misuse — and connect people with resources available to help.

After the performance, a moderator leads a panel discussion with counselors and public health experts. When someone loses a child in a fire or an accident, panelist Erick Becker points out, the community turns out with casseroles and support. "Everyone fills the freezer."

Too often, when a child is lost to an overdose, people retreat. No one knows what to say. The freezer stands empty.

Roselle Higgins raises her hand. She is raising her twin grandchildren. This play is her first outing since her daughter died from an overdose a year ago. She tells her story through choking sobs; by the time she finishes, most people in the theatre are crying with her. This grieving mother is surrounded, and wrapped in embraces.

MAYHEW PROGRAM

Community happens when a young man becomes a mentor

Brandon Pierre was working for a Fortune 100 company outside Dallas. He had graduated from an honors program at Plymouth State riding 10 competing job offers; now he was earning big dollars, covering a vast sales territory — and questioning if any of it was what he wanted.

He called his Mayhew Program mentor, whom he had known since he was 10 years old.

Brandon had been an angry little kid when he was introduced to Mayhew. His dad was absent, his grades were poor. Mayhew gave him an instant community — and a “framework of operating” based on “respect, responsibility, community and challenge” that he would apply to everything he did.

Now, he made the decision to change tracks. As he did, a job opened up at Mayhew. Brandon leaped.

The Mayhew Program gives at-risk boys two summers of camp on an island in Newfound Lake, followed by weeklong trips for four summers and two years of intensive mentoring focused on post-high-school plans. Year-round mentoring continues throughout.

More than 2,000 New Hampshire boys have gone through the program since its inception 50 years ago.

“A lot of these guys come from really difficult circumstances,” Brandon says of the boys he now mentors in his hometown of Manchester. Their young lives are often weighted with complex challenges: absent parents, dangerous neighborhoods, poverty, fallout from the opioid crisis.

To them, Brandon represents a whole different set of possibilities.

Mayhew doesn’t change people, Brandon says. It gives boys “an authentic, honest belief in themselves — which allows them to change their future.”

PENACOOK COMMUNITY CENTER

Community happens when seniors are connected

Paul St. Louis retired seven years before his wife, Kathy. With the freedom from work came an unwelcome side effect: a feeling of being unmoored from purpose.

Paul and Kathy had recently moved to be closer to Paul's cardiologists. Their children and grandchildren were spread out from Missouri to Alaska to California.

A friend from church told them about the Penacook Community Center.

They joined. Paul started serving meals to seniors, volunteered on the board of directors, went on senior program outings, found a friend who was similarly obsessed with cribbage.

Increasingly, people are moving to new communities after they retire. When they do, they stay healthier and happier when they create relationships in those new places. Nonprofit community and senior centers provide points of connection.

Kathy has since joined Paul in retirement. They read to children in the community center's preschool; Kathy has done Tai Chi; they have joined trips to Ogunquit, Maine, the Winnepesaukee Playhouse and more. When Kathy learned through the center that the local soup kitchen needed a secretary, she volunteered.

And every week, they have lunch with friends — with Clay and Marti and Iris and Beverly and Adrien and Lizette ... People they know, and who know them.

"Once you get involved, it's a wonderful circle," Kathy said. "We all take care of each other."

Community happens when good is built from tragedy

Mark Anderson made a decision at his son's wake.

Austin, 17, had died in a car crash in which a friend also lost her life.

Mark looked around at his son's friends, who had come to pay their respects, and thought about how much he wanted kids in his community to have a place where they felt connected, and heard, and celebrated.

He would build that place.

Lindsey Messina, a recent college graduate, embraced the idea and worked alongside him.

They dug in, learned, enlisted a board of directors and a corps of volunteers.

Mark reached out to a church in Brentwood, which had a school and gym standing empty, and set about converting them into the Austin17 House. Lindsey became its director.

Now, on a weeknight, a volunteer is cooking chili for 50. Kids are shooting hoops and playing foosball. The karaoke machine creates a mighty din. There are rooms for art and SAT prep and video production and music and 4-H. The Lions Club built the kitchen. The Cub Scouts are planning a trail out back. The American Legion has helped raise money. Wednesdays are for middle- and high-schoolers, Fridays for families, Sunday is community casserole night.

The plan is to make Austin17 House a daily after-school program. Anderson is working with others already looking to replicate the effort.

"Lindsey was an aesthetician, I am a mechanic," Mark said. "We'd no idea what we were doing. We're just ordinary people."

Ordinary people who figured out how to create something good from tragedy.

DOVER ADULT LEARNING CENTER

Community happens when new neighbors become old friends

Asuka Thompson moved to the United States when her husband, Joseph, a technical sergeant in the Air Force, was transferred to Pease Air Force Base from Okinawa, Japan.

She was pregnant with their first child when Joseph received orders for a six-month deployment. Asuka found herself virtually alone in a new country — no friends, no family, nothing familiar.

She started attending English classes at the Dover Adult Learning Center.

The school became her center of community. She made friends from New Hampshire — and also from China and Korea and Iran and Congo and Russia. Her English improved, and communicating with her New Hampshire neighbors became easier.

“I couldn’t survive here if I didn’t find this school,” Asuka said.

The Adult Learning Center serves about 1,000 students a year in its core classes — from high school diploma and equivalency classes to English for speakers of other languages, adult literacy, computer skills and career pathways.

One day, late in Asuka’s pregnancy, she arrived for class to find the room full of baby gifts and decorations and a dozen smiling friends. She burst into tears.

Thanksgiving and Christmas came while Joseph was still deployed. Lien Harris, Asuka’s English teacher, invited Asuka to share the holidays with her family.

At Asuka’s first American Thanksgiving, with the table laden with turkey and stuffing and potatoes and gravy, everyone took turns sharing something they were grateful for.

Asuka’s turn came. She was grateful, she said, for meeting such good friends.

FROM THE CHAIR AND PRESIDENT

The New Hampshire Charitable Foundation is New Hampshire's statewide community foundation. Strengthening community is at the heart of everything we do.

The people who give through this Foundation are part of a growing community of generosity that allows the Foundation to make grants, award scholarships and work on some of the most pressing issues facing our state. The Foundation awarded $38 million in grants and $6 million in scholarships in 2018.

The nonprofit organizations that Foundation grants support are in the business of building community every day: Organizing lunches for seniors. Helping our kids reach their potential. Expanding understanding and connection with the arts. Protecting New Hampshire's natural landscapes and resources for the common good. Helping people recover from addiction and regain dignity. Reporting the news with diligence and objectivity. Welcoming our newest neighbors. New Hampshire would not be New Hampshire without them. And students who get the education they need are better able to thrive in careers and sustain their communities.

Our staff, board of directors, partners from the business and public sectors, 100-plus regional advisors, fund advisors and scholarship advisors are bound by a deep commitment to making New Hampshire's communities stronger for everyone who calls New Hampshire home.

We have often called the Foundation community New Hampshire's "network for good." We're honored to work with all of you.

2018 HIGHLIGHTS

NEW HAMPSHIRE TOMORROW

New Hampshire Tomorrow is the Foundation's 10-year, $100-million investment to increase opportunities for young people in need. In 2018, $17.5 million was awarded in early childhood development; family and youth supports; substance use prevention, treatment and recovery; and education and career pathways. A $250,000 grant from Eastern Bank, plus matching donations, means that the Charitable Foundation will nearly double the number of scholarships awarded for short-term education and workforce training over three years. Hundreds of people — like Samiksha Patel of Derry — are getting help to move into high-wage jobs in high-demand fields. Scholarships are directed to students who experience barriers to opportunity: New Americans, those with significant financial need and students who are the first in their families to attend college.

SUPPORTING NONPROFIT OPERATIONS

Multiyear operating support is critical for nonprofit missions. The Foundation's Community Grants program, through which grants totaling nearly $3.3 million were made to 68 organizations in 2018 (including to the Dover Adult Learning Center, p. 14; the Mayhew Program, p. 8; and the New Hampshire Theatre Project, p. 6), is now entirely dedicated to providing multiyear operating support.

PREVENTING SUBSTANCE USE

2018 marked the seventh year of the Foundation's 10-year investment in youth substance misuse prevention. Prevention in the early years is key because it dramatically reduces the likelihood that people will experience a substance use disorder later in life. Data from the latest Youth Risk Behavior Survey show that New Hampshire's high school students have continued to decrease their use of alcohol, cigarettes and recreational prescription drugs. In 2018, The Chronicle of Philanthropy reported on the Foundation's work combating the state's drug crisis. Megan O'Neil's article, "New Hampshire Charitable Foundation Takes the Lead in Battling Opioid Abuse," was featured in the June issue of the national publication.

A STRONGER NORTH COUNTRY

The Neil and Louise Tillotson Fund awarded $3.3 million in grants and $40,000 in scholarships in Coös County and surrounding communities in 2018. The Empower Coös Youth Grantmaking Program has given high school students the chance to create and implement a grantmaking program that supports local programming for youth while developing students' leadership skills and deepening their connection to place.

FOR OUR KIDS

The New Hampshire Bureau of Child Development and Head Start Collaboration selected the Foundation to receive a 2018 Mary Stuart Gile Award for helping to build statewide infrastructure in the field of early childhood.

GREATER GIVING STARTS HERE

Mainstay Technologies created a new donor-advised fund at the Foundation in 2018 to make its corporate giving more intentional. The company matches employee contributions into the fund 1:1, and also makes additional lump-sum gifts quarterly. Foundation staff helps inform the company's grantmaking, and a team of Mainstay employees recommends grants from the fund. In all, 65 new philanthropic funds were established at the Foundation in 2018. See pages 28 and 29 for a full list of new funds.

Judy Burrows has made helping people get an education the focus of her life's work.

During her 32-year tenure as director of student aid at the New Hampshire Charitable Foundation, scholarship awards to New Hampshire students increased from $750,000 per year to $6 million per year. The number of scholarship funds dedicated to helping New Hampshire students jumped twelvefold: from 34 to 415.

Judy's family experience made her a believer in education as the key to economic mobility: Her own father had worked his way out of poverty by working his way through college during the Great Depression.

Under her leadership, the Foundation began awarding significantly more scholarships for two-year degrees and workforce training, and clearly articulated its philosophy of awarding scholarships to students with the greatest financial need.

Judy retires at the end of 2019. Her life's work has made life better for thousands of people.
